RODBOROUGH
School type	In use by	Brief description
Poor's School	1700	supported by annual subscriptions plus endowments by merchant Nathaniel Clissold (£20) and clothier Nathaniel Beard (£10). In 1710 a large bequest (£250) from Henry King was added to the charity's funds, together with £5 from clothier Michael Halliday. Became
Reading charity	1790s	In the old church house, one master taught writing to six children and reading to 13. A new schoolroom and master's house was added in 1820.
Reading charity	1834	The number of pupils was increased to 50, with separate sections for girls and boys. Rodborough children were taught for free; the master and mistress could take paying pupils from further afield. Became
Endowed School	1873	with 55 boys and 58 girls
Endowed School	1898	Rodborough School Board took over administration and replaced the old building by the church with a new school at the bottom of Rodborough Hill. Became
Rodborough County Primary School	1902	with 201 pupils in 1911 and 320 in 1973. Still active
Endowed School	1912	The bequests went to the Stroud Educational Foundation for scholarships for Rodborough pupils at Marling and Stroud High School.
Halliday Writing charity	1712	Clothier Thomas Halliday gave £100 to teach and cloth three poor boys. The master of the Reading charity was employed to teach them. The bequest was later merged into the Endowed School.
Horrell charity school	1804	taught seven girls to read, write, sew and knit; merged into the Reading charity school after 1826
Sunday School	1821	107 children were being taught by 1833
Dissenting schools	1833	Three day-schools attached to dissenting chapels (one of them Rodborough Tabernacle) taught children for pence. Became
Sunday School	1833	at Rodborough Tabernacle with 237 pupils
King's Court British School/Board School Bowl Hill	1838	established by Rodborough Tabernacle congregation in a new building. By 1866 the school (62 pupils) was paid for with a government grant, voluntary contributions and pence. Taken over by School Board in 1878; 130 pupils by 1885. Became
Kings Court County school	1911	with 111 pupils. Became infants' school before 1932. Replaced by
Gastrells County Primary	1972	in a new building opened north of the old school
Butter Row Board school	1880	School board built a new school south of Butter Row for 112 pupils. Became
Butter Row County school	1911	with 94 children. Attendance fell slowly and the school was closed in 1965.
Bownham Park school	1968	a county secondary school for pupils with learning difficulties opened opposite the Bear Inn. In 2017 private houses were built on the site.

Rodborough had a number of private schools in the 19th century: a gentlemen's boarding school in 1830, another one at Rodborough Fort in the 1840s, and a boys' prep school in 1880 at Spillman's Court.