Sandling Jimmy

Stroud Journal 11/03/1919

Met Jimmy Sandling of Dudbridge wicker fame, home from the R.A.F., and very glad to be out of it and into free civvy life once more. He owned he was happier doing 12 to 14 hours work a day at his own job than doing nothing in the army.

Sandling John

John Sandling, a Dudbridge Basket Maker, aged 39, appealed on the grounds of hardship. He said his widowed father was an invalid and his only brother was serving with the 5th Gloucesters. His case was deferred but he eventually enlisted, returning to the family business after the war. John Sandling senior died in January 1917.

Sandling Samuel

Lance Corporal Sammy Sandling had a very sad home coming on leave to attend his father's funeral... his father recently died at Dudbridge. Of course, Sammy like his father is a very well- known basket maker, not a very common profession at present. He went out with the 1st Glosters and broke his ankle jumping some obstacle while chasing the Huns. Now completely recovered and doing light duties at Horfield barracks and welcoming the local lads as they join up. Sammy was always a chap for a scrap, so it is no wonder that he is anxious to get back to France again to finish the job.

('Arms & the Man', Stroud Journal 09/02/1917)

Lance Corpl. Sammy Sandling of the Gloucesters is in hospital at Sheffield badly wounded this time but going on as well as can be expected. His brother found him quite happy and comfortable with the change from the trenches.

Enlisted 11th Gloucesters ...

Of Bath Road, attended Rodborough School, an employee of the Stroud News, who reported that "His enthusiasm for war has been a bit of a worry to his employers and parents". Jack joined the colours at a very early stage of the conflict and it was only when he was down for a draft that it was discovered he was underage. In August 1918, he legally joined the Navy and the Stroud News wished him good luck "despite the turmoil he caused in this office by his patriotic fervour"!
